Quake Challenges Detection Methods

By Jay Marthews

Washington Past Service PASADENA, California preliminary investigation of Thursday's earthquake indicates that it originated in a previously unknown extension of the Whittier Fault, raising questions about traditional methods of detecting dangerous earthquake zones.

Seismologists with the U.S. Geological Survey and the California Institute of Technology have concluded that the first, most severe shock occurred eight miles (13 kilometers) underground and more than one mile northwest of the mapped end of the fault. That end point is 12 miles east of downtown

Los Angeles. Several of the more than a dozen aftershocks have occurred as much as three miles north of the mapped line and at a depth that suggests a previously unknown fault difficult o detect with current instruments.

The existence of such hidden faults, which scientists say may be fairly common, "becomes a con-cern in terms of, for instance, siting nuclear power plants," said Lucile M. Jones, a federal seismologist.

The newly discovered fault dips at a 25-degree angle beneath the suburban area between Pasadena and Los Angeles.

Saudis Mobilized As Iran Flotilla Neared Oil Fields

By Patrick E. Tyler

Winshington Post Service DUBAI, United Arab Emirates

- Saudi Arabia conducted a full military mobilization, including land troops, and sent an urgent warning to Iran that it was ready to "make a stand" against any attack after Iran launched about 60 armed speedboats against a Saudi off-shore oil installation, according to source in Washington familiar with U.S. military reports.

Saudi Arabia sent Americanmade fighter jets and at least two frigates to warn off the formation Saturday, which got within 20 miles (32 kilometers) of an offshore oil terminal at Khafji, near the Saudi border with Kuwait, sources in the Gulf and in Washington said.

There was no indication of shots having been exchanged. A source in Washington familiar with U.S. military reports of the incident said the Saudis conducted a full military mobilization, including land troops, and sent an urgent warning to Tehran that it was ready to "make a stand" against any attack on the oil field.

For the Iranians, the incident "was a test of whether the Saudis would stand or back off," a source in Washington said. While Saudi Arabia confronted the Iranian deployment, its denial of the maneuver underlined the great sensitivity among the Arab states of the region about any confrontation with Iran.

U.S. ships escorting Kuwaiti tankers south through the Gulf broke away from the convoy and steamed toward the area of the confrontation, according to press pool reports released by the Pentagon. They halted north of Bahrain and maintained a high state of readiness, the reports said.

Iran said Sunday it had conducted "limited scale" naval maneuvers in the northern Gulf during the weekend in part to meet the threat of "foreign forces in the region," according to Iran's state news

U.S., Canada Reach Free Trade Pact

By Stuart Auerbach

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The United States and Canada, the world's two largest trading partners, beat a weekend deadline and reached an historic free trade agreement that will greatly reduce tariffs and other Word that the two days of highlevel talks held here had been successfully concluded came shortly before midnight on Saturday. Can-ada's finance minister, Michael Wilson, appeared at a window of the Treasury building and gave a thumbs-up sign to reporters waiting outside. [Specifies of the pact, which must be approved by Congress and Canada's Parliament, were not immediately released. Kelly Winkler, spokesman at the U.S. Trade depresentative's office, said that the officials were "dotting the i's and crossing the t's" on Sunday, United Press International reported from Washington. President Ronald Reagan the accord and said that it "will provide enormous benefits for the United States" and "over time creare thousands of jobs." The White House, which noted that the agreement would begin Jan. 2, 1988, said

"the essential elements have been agreed to." In Ottawa, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney also said that agreement was reached on "major elements" of the plan.]

The negotiators beat by minutes a midnight deadline required by Congress to win its speedy, amendment-free confirmation of the pact.

The agreement — a key element in the Reagan administration's trade policy —was considered vital for U.S.-Canadian relations. They have suffered over the past three years from a series of trade disputes and were expected to worsen without a trade agreement.

If the talks had failed, as it appeared they might as recently as Thursday night, businessmen from both countries predicted a rise of protectionism in the United States and Canada that could have shaken the world economy.

The pact would ease restrictions to trade in merchandise, services and investment between the two countries, which exchanged $150 billion in trade during 1986. A major demand by the Utaited States was believed to be the phasing out of tariffs between the two countries. Canadian tariffs are about twice as high as U.S. duties.

The talks were stalled on the thorny issue of meeting Canada's insistence on being exempt from U.S. laws against unfair trade. That was the main demand from Mr. Mulroney, who had made a free trade agreement the cornerstone of his economic policy. But there was a storm of opposi-

London Hearts Know Where the Wild Goose Goes

By Howell Raines New York Times Service

LONDON — Autumn is settling over London, bringing all its familiar glories and one distinct surprise for any American with a homesick ear.

At this season, at dawn, in the heart of the city, it is possible to awaken to a sound so out of place, so distinctly resonant of other shores, that it seems at first to have leaked

The sound goes like this: kronk, kronk, KRONK, kronk-kronk, KRONK! It is, unmistakably, the sound that Canada geese make as they tread the night air in their great annual At this time of year the Canada geese of North America are beating their way toward their ancestral haunts off Tangier Island, Maryland, or Lake Mattamuskeet, North As it happens, London is home to an exile population of these noble birds marooned in a vast city yet subject to the same timeless urge to fly under the October moon. So they travel each twilight and dawn in a truncated migratory circuit, from the water in Hyde Park to the lake in St. James's Park and back again, honking fortornly to one another.

In London, such oddities almost always bear investigating. In this case, it takes little investigation to discover that the aristocrat of the American flyways is a much-despised

This being Britain, there is someone in charge of the matter - a civil servant responsible for every goose in central London. His name is Malcolm Kerr, and his mandate extends to all 42 species of waterfowl that live in the main royal parks: St. James's, Hyde, Kensington and Regent's. As royal bird keeper of the Central London Parks, Mr.

Kerr and his terrier, Stumpy, live a kind of Doctor Doolittle existence on Duck Island in St. James's lake. And when the call of the wild goose rings over London, Mr. Kerr knows the hardest part of his year is behind him.

In the spring and summer, he must see to the incubation and hatching of 41 species of exotic waterfowl. Sometimes the eggs come in such a rush that the incubators overflow, and he puts chicken hens atop the swan and goose eggs.

The 42d species represents an opposite problem. "In themselves, they're quite a nice bird," he said of the Canada geese. "But they breed so well. We control them by taking their eggs away. Some nest in places we never find, though, and they rear up to 12 youngsters."

Egg snatching is a gentler method of population control than that used in the past, when up to 100 geese at a time were killed by injection. These mass executions were kept very quiet for fear of rousing the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The goose problem represents a royal hobby that ran amok. In 1660, the Russian ambassador gave King Charles II two pelicans and they were let loose in a swampy pond in St. James's Park

Waterfowl collecting caught on throughout England. Nowadays, Mr. Kerr said, the Canada geese are accused of cropping the grass too short, crowding the native geese out of the nesting areas and taking space from more glamorous

Life for the geese here is not unpleasant. But for an American of a certain age, to lie abed in this city and hear the geese passing over is to think of the Frankie Laine lyric, "My heart knows what the wild goose knows, and I must go where the wild goose goes."

In London, where the wild goose goes is ceaselessly back and forth in the two miles between Hyde Park and St. James's. And in the fall, when the Canadas are up in the dark air bonking their old byrun to wanderlust, that seems a little sad.

Race Becoming Intense To Succeed Nakasone Continuity of Policies Is a Certainty

factional struggle will follow the official start of the campaign on Thursday, which technically is for the presidency of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, or LDP. As a practical matter, whoever wins will become prime minister and govern for at least the next two vears. It will be a delicate period for to come under mounting overseas pressure to play a more vigorous global role, especially to promote onomic expansion. Despite the importance of the party race, Japan is not going to march off suddenly in new directions, regardless of who wins. "Since we are all operating within the greater framework of the LDP, there will be no major differ-ences," said Mr. Takeshita, the party's secretary-general and a former finance minister. "I often say that it is a matter of methods, or of approach, or of mances in the execution of policies." Most political analysts regard Mr. Takeshita as the front-runner on the strength of raw numbers. His party faction, essentially a political machine, is by far the largest, and so he is in the best position to put together a required majority of the 445 Liberal Democratic members of the Diet, or parliament, who ultimately elect the prime minister. The new leader would take over at the end of Mr. Nakasone's term on Oct. 30. He took office in 1982, and last year, the LDP voted to allow party presidents a one-year extension of their normal limit of

To win, however, each man must form alliances among the party's six major factions and scattering of independents. There is a fourth contender, Susumu Nikaido, a crusty 77-year-old party veteran who has become something of a political gadfly in day - are likely to follow basic the past few years. He is running mainly out of pique with Mr. Takeshita. Experts give him virtually no chance of winning, and many ex-pect that lack of support will force him to drop out before the formal issues will get short shrift. Except for catch phrases and points of emphasis, all three major contenders sound much alike, talking about the need to improve recently soured relations with the United States, to restructure the Japanese economy to make it less dependent on exports for growth and to recycle Japan's enormous trade surpluses to help less formnate countries.

Japan Abandons Plan to Build Fighter

By John H. Cushman Jr. See Josh Times Service

WASHINGTON - Japan has abandoned its ambition to design and build a home-grown jet fighter for its armed forces. Instead, it will acquire a slightly modified U.S. aircraft. Defense Minister Yuko Kurihara has announced.

Yielding to persistent U.S. pres-sures, Mr. Kurihara on Friday told his U.S. counterpart. Defense Sec-retary Caspar W. Weinberger, that Japan would use either General Dynamics Corp.'s F-16 or McDon-nell Douglas Corp.'s F-15 to fill an order for at least 100 aircraft that will have a value of several billion dollars. The plane will be largely built in Japan.

The decision to select an American plane represents the final reversal in Japan's long-held position Lima, the police said Sunday. The bus was carrying 60 passengers.

At a private meeting in which Mr. Kurihara told Mr. Weinberger of Japan's decision. Mr. Weinber-ger "praised it as a decision that made sense for Japan," a U.S. official who attended the meeting said.

The question of the FSX, as the new airplane is called in Japan, has been a sticking point in the two nations' military and international trade relations, which are closely linked. In addition, the U.S. aerospace industry had interpreted Japan's intention to design a fighter as a thinly veiled attempt to build up a more competitive aircraft in-

Rebels See In Angola

By William Claiborne

Washington Post Service
CUNJAMBA, Angola — Anti-Communist rebels have blunted a government offensive against their strongholds in southern Angola but are bracing for a larger assault that could determine the outcome of Angola's 12-year civil war, accord-ing to the guerrilla leader Jonas Savimbi.

Mr. Savimbi, whose National Union for the Total Independence of Angola is backed by the United States and South Africa, said his 8,000 guerrillas faced two columns of at least 18,200 Soviet-directed government troops along the vital Lomba River.

He predicted that before the rainy season begins in the next three weeks, "there will be thousands and thousands of bodies in

Mr. Savimbi spoke to reporters at front-line positions near the Lomba River and in a news conference at his bunker headquarters in Mavinga, 30 miles (50 kilometers) outheast of Cuniamba.

The expected battle would be decisive, he said, because the Ango-lans have committed their best troops to the two columns, backed by 150 tanks and more than 200 armored vehicles. He said that UNITA was prepared to bring up reserves to match the Angolans' strength and that he was relying on U.S.-supplied anti-aircraft missiles to limit the effectiveness of air support from MiG23s and MiG21s piloted by Cubans and Angolans.

Mr. Savimbi said a "spectacular" battle took place Sept. 13 on the Lomba River when UNITA forces drove back two battalions of government troops.

Casualty figures given by his ides, however, suggested a battle of less ferocious proportions. The aides said that while three government battalions had been routed and three tanks destroyed, only 70 been counted, compared to 10 UN-ITA dead.

UNITA claims that since the first tentative probes of the dry season offensive began three months ago, 1,023 government troops have died while UNITA has lost 86 fighters. It also claims to have destroyed 56 tanks and shot. down 11 government helicopters and three MiG fighters.

Two Soviet military personnel were killed and four injured in re-cent fighting, UNITA intelligence officers said. They offered no evi-dence to substantiate their claim. Mr. Savimbi and his chief of staff, General Ben Ben, denied reports by the Angolan government that South African air and ground forces were involved in the fighting on UNITA's side.

South Africa's defense minister. General Magnus Malan, was quoted Saturday night by the state-run South African Broadcasting Corp. as confirming that South Africa maintained a presence in southern Angola, though he did not explicitly say the forces had been used against Angolan troops in the

In a 38-page report made public Saturday, the group urged steppedup talks on conventional arms reductions, regular summit meetings, the possible relaxation of trade barriers if Soviet human rights performance improves. Soviet observer status in international financial institutions like the International Monetary Fund. Soviet-American cooperation in the Middle East and other steps designed to identify and exploit overlapping interests.

"While the Soviet Union remains a closed commu-nist society." it said, "Gorbachey has challenged a whole series of ingrained practices and attitudes from strictly centralized economic management to an often-militarized foreign policy.

On arms control, the task force urged the West to push for reductions in long-range weapons and an agreement on chemical weapons. On President Ronald Reagan's idea for a space-based defense system, the report said only that "both sides need to find ways to strengthen the ABM treaty and to insure that any research on strategic defensive systems is consistent with preservation of the treaty."

Seismologists from Cornell Uniersity and some other laboratories are attempting to detect such faults and other subtle features of the Earth's crust, using heavy equipment that sends vibrations into the ground and delicate instruments that detect the echoes off underground faults.

"The existence of these faults is no real cause for panic," Mr. Eaton said, but it underlines the need for increasing the number of seismograph stations and carefully studying all newly recorded quakes.

Eiffel Tower Joins In Trib Birthday Bash

The International Herald Tribune has celebrated its 100th anniversary in what Reuters called a gathering of the cream of the journalistic world in France and the United States.

In a dispatch, the news agency reported that the city of Paris lent the Eiffel Tower on Saturday night to serve as the 100th candle on the birthday cake of its English-language newspaper.

The paper celebrated its centenary with a gala banquet for 1,500 guests in a plastic marquee erected on the steps of Paris's famous Trocadero gardens.

After the paper's directors had blown out the 99 candles on a giant chocolate cake, guests were asked to blow across the river Seine at the brightly lit Fiffel

Why They Are Called Washington Redskins

The current debate in The Washington Post letters column

over where the capital's professional football team, the Redskins, got their name, apparently has been settled by Jordan Harrison Price. She is the grand-daughter of the late George Preston Marshall, who founded the team in Boston in 1932.

Some say the name's origins are racist, Mrs. Price noted. Others contend they were named to honor the brave patriots of the Boston Tea Party who dressed up as indians and threw bales of tea into Boston Harbor." in fact, she says, the team started as the Boston Braves, playing at Braves field, home of the baseball team, "as was the custom at other stadiums."

"But when Marshall moved his football Braves over to Fenway Park," home of Boston's other baseball club, the Red Sox, "the baseball Braves strenuously objected to his continuing to use the name 'Braves,' since they were no longer playing in Braves Field."

So Marshall picked an approximate synonym, Redskins, because he had always been an admirer of the American Indian and because one of the team's coaches, 'Lone Star' Dietz, was himself an American Indian.

Mrs. Price did not try to establish where the baseball Braves got their name.

Sanctions Cut Both Ways

anti-apartheid legislation enacted last year is putting the question of sanctions against South Africa back on the American political agenda. It is a debate for which there is no serious need. There is scant agreement on whether the sanctions voted last year tover a presidential veior were wise. The Reagan administration feels they have not worked and will not, and some part of the Congress feels they have not worked and will - if they are strengthened. Many others who detest apartheid are agnostic. A year's expenence has shown sanctions cut both ways. They push the ruling white minority toward reform, but they also stiffen its resistance. Before considering new sanctions. more time and evidence are needed to calcu-

A requirement for review written into great question. It is evident that the various sources of change inside and outside South Africa are making a mark. Look at the items listed by Secretary of State George Shultz in a speech Sept. 29: the new Indaba constitutional proposals negotiated by all racial groups, the meetings of Afrika-ners and the African National Congress. negotiations across racial lines by black trade unions and other groups.

Mr. Shultz reaffirmed the administration view that the primary sources of change in South Africa were internal and that U.S. influence was necessarily limited. He took the occasion to present a democratic vision of South Africa's future and to summarize the contribution the United States intends to keep making by its openness to all peaceful groups, by its aid to black projects and by its forward-looking private business presence. Some critics view the administration approach as a cop-out, or worse. We disagree. The administration's effort to keep the policy, and the policy debate, within consensual bounds makes sense.

Keeping the Banks Afloat

The Sunday Telegraph (London).

More than 200 banks are expected to fail this year, the most since the Depression. The latest victim was a large Houston-based bank that the government rescued to the tune of nearly $1 billion. Critics say bailing out large banks encourages continued imprudent risk-taking. But as long as the government is insurer, it makes sense for it to cut its losses by keeping a big bank operating. - The Chicago Tribune.

East-West: Reagan Deserves Credit for Getting Down to Business

BOSTON — President Reagan's decision to go for an arms agreement and an early summit meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev has left some of his faithful flock disgruntled, Conservative Republican senators say they will try to block the arms treaty. Rightist commentators write gloomily about the menace of detente.

In those reactions there is a sense of having been betrayed. And the objec-tors have a point. After all, Ronald Reagan is the same man who denounced detente at his first White House press conference in 1981, who said Soviet leaders "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any

The broad answer is that a president who wants to leave his mark on world history is inevitably drawn in that direction. He heads one of two superpowers, and relations with the er are his prime responsibility. Whatever his ideology, he is drawn to make that relationship more rational if he can. And arms control is the most potent symbol. Of course those who call themselves conservatives reject that logic, as do conservatives in the Soviet Union. The rhetoricians of the American right argue that arms agreements full the United States into letting its defenses down, that it is better off to have a bristling relationship with the Soviet Union. mediate nuclear forces, or INF. But when he was in a position to make a mark on history, he was all over himself with eagerness to negotiate an arms treaty — one that many would say was less advantageous to the United States than the INF proposal. Mr. Reagan has not given up his views about the communist menace by any means. He summoned up some of the old rhetoric just a few days after announcing the summit meeting. But from the start of his second term he has sought to do business with the Russians. The call of history was there. Still, the negotiations over INF might never have reached fruition. Many of Mr. Reagan's own appointees had no enthusiasm for the project. His wild ideas at the Reykjavik sum-mit meeting no doubt intensified their fears on arms control, But two factors pushed the Reagan administration toward an INF agreement.

First, there was Mr. Gorbachev. He wanted an arms agreement. He wanted it so much that he made concession after concession to the American negotiating position. He left al-most no ground for refusing to agree except to say that the Americans really did not mean their own proposals. Mr. Gorbachev agreed to the original Reagan proposal to eliminate all intermediate-range weapons. He agreed to include shorter-range missiles. He agreed, in sum, to remove 1,435 warheads from the Soviet ar-mory while the United States gave up 348. He was also so agreeable to onsite inspections that the United States pulled back from its demands, fearing too many Russian inspectors on its soil. To say no to all that would have been rather embarrassing. Mr. kissinger said grumpily that there was a lesson in this business: "Be thoughtful about what you propose. The other side may accept it."

Second, there was the Iran-contra affair. If its image of folly was to be changed in any significant degree be-fore Mr. Reagan's presidency ended, the only real possibility was a pro-ductive meeting with Mr. Gorbachev. To take Senate approval of an INF agreement for granted would be un-wise. There are many traps ahead, among them Senator Bob Dole's felt need to play to the far right in his quest for the Republican nomination.

The dangers are the more acute because this tired, befuddled administration has no evident candidate for the tough job of handling the proposed treaty in the Senate. Secretary of State George Shultz probably will have to take charge himself and that will not be easy. But Mr. Reagan deserves credit. He has proved more flexible - more sen-- than many of his supporters. He has taken at least this much of the chance to deal with the Soviet Union at an opportune moment in history.

South Africa: The Best Hope Is Economic Expansion

C APETOWN — A year ago the European Community, the Commonwealth countries and the United States introduced economic sanctions against South Africa. The effects of these sanctions are under review.

The Reagan administration, which tried unsuccessfully to veto the antiapartheid act approved by Congress a year ago, believes that the sanctions ave been misguided and is unlikely to recommend new penalties.

The experience of the past year bears out this belief. The most compelling evidence was the election in May for South Africa's white assembly. The election produced a distinct swing to the right, following a campaign that played beavily on the security concerns of the white minority.

Mr. Botha has since reimposed the ous-fruit growers employ nearly a quarter of a million workers, all of 2000 the number will have risen to nearly eight million, without sanc-tions, and to almost 10 million with sanctions. And this is a nation without much of a social security safety net. Whatever harm is done to South Africa's economy will certainly harm the economies of its neighbors, for southern Africa is one economic unit. One wonders, then, why leaders of the black states are so vociferous in supporting sauctions, and why, since South African blacks are least able to sustain the mass increase in jobless-ness, their leaders also advocate sanctions and other punitive measures.

The answer to the first question is that the front-line states, while continuing to trade briskly with South Africa, see international pressure as the only way to bring down the Preto only way to oring down the re-toria regime. They also rely on the West to make good any economic losses resulting from sanctions. The answer to the second is usually "that South African blacks are suffering so much already that any additional suffering caused by sanctions will make little difference to their lives."

This contention is not borne out by the reality of joblessness in a country with no welfare and no food stamps. There is a more sophisticated, if equal-ly unrealistic, reply: Economic stress will bring on the revolution. Such a view totally underestimates the strength, ferocity and determination of the armed forces in South Africa to maintain the status quo.

If there were any chance that sanctions would dismantle apartheid. I would be the first to support them. But reducing South Africa to a wasteland will lead not to a nonracial democracy but to more oppression. A little over a year ago, Archbishop Desmond Tutu said, "The onus is on those who do not want sanctions to provide us with a viable, nonviolent strategy to force the dismantling of apartheid." While I disagree with the premise that sanctions provide such a strategy, it is relevant to ask what alternative there is, and it is particularly relevant when the question comes from a man who cannot vote, despite the fact that he is South African-born, the head of the Anglican Church in South Africa and a Nobel laureate. The sad truth is that there is no instant solution to transform the South African scene. The most effective instrument for change is economic expansion within the country. This is the force that led in the first instance to those noncosmetic changes that have taken place in the last 10 years, the opening of skilled jobs to blacks, improvements in education and training, recognition of black trade unions, acceptance of a permanent black urban population and the abolition of the pass laws.

The Western democracies should continue protesting the miserable practices of apartheid and use all positive measures to speed its demise. But this should not lead them to impose punitive measures that will wreck the economy of the country.

Dollar, Fixed-Rate Market Go Their Separate Ways

By CARL GEWIRTZ

ARIS — The usually happy tandem of a strong dollar fueling a buoyant bond market was broken last week. Bond prices fell while the currency held steady. A rally in the New York bond market late Friday did seem to restore the normal relationship, but a number of analysts believe that the break early in the week was a signal that the two markets increasingly will move in opposite directions.

The way these analysts see it, the more stable the dollar is, the more volatile interest rates will be

There is now little doubt that governments are determined to stabilize exchange rates within the bands established last February at a meeting in Paris. That commitment was reaffirmed last week by finance ministers and central bankers at the annual 'If you fix exchange meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

This official commitment to rates, interest rates will be volatile.

stability is designed to give the United States the time it needs to begin showing an improvement in its huge trade deficit. Initially, a weaker dollar has a perverse effect on the trade balance — import costs rise faster than the level of U.S. exports spurred by devaluation.

Government officials are confident that over time the U.S. deficit will narrow. The problem is that market operators are not one bank said.

Although there is a wide consensus that some improvement is on the way, there is considerable divergence about whether it will be enough or whether the dollar really needs to drop more. Since further official devaluation is currently out of the question, the doubters conclude that the only way exchange rates can be held stable is if dollar interest rates rise. "Official manipulation of exchange rates to produce artificial stability creates distortions," said the treasurer of one major bank. "It channels market forces away from the foreign exchange market." The result, he said, is more volatility in interest rates, with rates rising as confidence ebbs and falling as confidence

HIS VIEW was also expressed by Credit Suisse First Boston in its weekly comment on the credit market: "If you want to fix exchange rates, then shocks will have to be absorbed by greater volatility in interest rate differentials. In the long-run, fixed exchange rates are only stable if inflation and interest rates in all countries converge around a similar level."

The CSFB comment closed with a question that highlights the dilemma investors now face and that explains the continuing glum mood in the international bond market. "Does that mean that German and Japanese inflation rates [and bond yields] have to rise toward U.S. and U.K. levels, or does it mean that U.S. and U.K. inflation rates [and bond yields] have to fall toward German and Japanese levels?

Unable to answer that question, investors continue to shun the Eurobond market. The only issue considered attractive was from Industrial Bank of Japan.

The 100 million Deutsche mark issue was managed by IBJ, the first time a Japanese bank has been permitted to play such a role.

The Bundesbank lifted its restriction on Japanese leading new issues after German banks were granted a similar privilege in the Tokyo market.

1BJ's five-year notes were offered at par bearing a coupon of "5% percent. This was slightly below yields available in the domestic market, but the 14-point selling concession offered to institutional investors put the effective yield at 17 basis points

Also well-received were the equity linked issues. Nomura was lead manager of a 50 million DM bond convertible into common [] (III) stock of Sodick, a Japanese machinery company. Carrying an indicated coupon of 1/2 to 1/4 percent and an expected conversion price of 5 percent over the prevailing stock price, the bonds ended the week at a 2 percent premium.

Leykam Mürztaler, an Austrian paper company, had a run-away success with its 100 million DM equity-warrants issue. Offered at 125, or 1,250 DM for each note nominally valued at 1,000 DM, the price at the end of the week was 144. The sevenyear notes carry an annual coupon of 61/2 percent and each 1,000 DM bond has 28 warrants to buy shares at a premium of 19.7

Overall, the equity-linked market remained overwhelmed by the flood of issues from Japanese companies that continue to tap the market despite the notable cooling of investor interest.

Canon Inc., unable to decide which investment banker to choose, put two issues into the market simultaneously. A fiveyear, $300-million issue led by Yamaichi is expected to carry a coupon of 3½ percent while a $200-million issue of six-year paper led by Nomura is expected with a coupon of 3% percent. Both issues were quoted below the offering price.

The five-year notes were off 1% points, still within the 24

As the Drinking Slows, World Liquor Firms Unite

NEW YORK - Faced with declining worldwide consump-tion, the international liquor industry is turning to consolidation as a way to prop up sagging sales.

Analysts say that by the end of the decade the industry, traditionally the domain of small, independent operators, will consist of a handful of conglomerates.

The decline in consumption, estimated to be at least 2 percent a year, has propelled the industry into a flurry of takeovers and mergers intended to give liquor companies complete control of their products, from the distillery

The deals can take many shapes. In some cases the distiller of one brand might buy another, or move closer to the consumer and acquire a distributor that has profitable market penetration. Britain's Guinness PLC, for example, entered into a marketing agreement in June with Moët Hennessy, a French company that in 1980 had acquired its own distributor, Schiefflin & Co. Then last month Guinness purchased its U.S. importer, Schenley Industries Inc. Guinness has also entered into a joint operating agreement with the Bacardi group in Spain.

Guinness's chief executive, Anthony Tennant, had a similar strategy when he was head of Grand Metropolitan PLC's sub-sidiary, International Distillers & Vintners. In 1980 Grand Metropolitan acquired Liggett Group Inc., the U.S. distributor of Grand Metropolitan's J&B

Then last January, Grand Met-ropolitan acquired Heublein Inc., the U.S. marketer of almost 100 brands of spirits, wines and beers, including Grand Met's Black Vel-vet whisky. And in July it forged an international drinks distribution network with Martell & Co.,

the French cognac maker.

The motives for these deals vary. In many cases the company being acquired not only can add to the balance sheet, but also can provide funds for promoting slower sellers. Beyond that, how-ever, there is the question of trying to grab a bigger piece of a smaller pie. "If you don't go out there, the

"It's a lot more economical to buy a brand," he said. "The onebrand company is going to find it very hard to compete."
With its long-standing base of production in Britain and its cen-

At the time of Hi-ram Walker's sale to Allied-Ly-ons last year, Hiram Walker owned 13 percent of the Bacardi group. Bacardi bought back the stake last month.

In the current environment, Ms. Mathieson said, Bacardi's multinational licensing bottling and distribution network puts the company in an extremely favorable bargaining position. Analysts say that a major deal with the Bacardi group would effec-tively close the door on any significant entries into the international spirits industry.

OPEC President Says Output Fell In September

LAGOS - OPEC's president, Rilwanu Lukman, said Sunday that the cartel's crude oil production in September was substantially lower than in August, when the group reportedly overshot its ceiling by a wide margin.

"The figures we have do indicate a substantially lower output by OPEC in September," Mr. Lukman said in an interview.

Mr. Lukman, who is also Nige-ria's oil minister, and the oil minis-ters of Indonesia and Venezuela were to begin on Monday a tour of six Gulf states, Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq, the United Arab Emirates, Oatar and Kuwait, to try to persuade them to rein in output.

Mr. Lukman did not specify the September production figures.
But asked if they were within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' self-imposed ceiling of 16.6 million barrels a day, he said, "Perhaps not."

Industry sources estimated OPEC's output in August at 19.3 million barrels above its ceiling. Mr. Lukman disputed those fig-ures, saying that output was only I million to 1.2 million barrels above the ceiling. Mr. Lukman and the Indonesian and Venezuelan ministers were mandated by OPEC at its full conference in Vienna last June to visit states violating the production acmember states to return to their quotas," Mr. Lukman said. He said the ministers would eventually tour all 13 member

He said the trip would also be used to prepare the ground for OPEC's next full conference, in Vienna in December, and to find ways of bringing Iraq into its ac-cord. Iraq, which rejected a quota lower than that of Iran, its enemy, did not sign the June accord.

Soviet to Help Iran Oil Search

Agence France-Presse PARIS -- Iran will soon begin exploring for oil in the southern part of the Caspian Sea with the help of the Soviet company Techno-Export, ac-cording to the official Iranian radio, monitored in Paris.

The Iranian Oil Ministry said an agreement for Techno-Export to provide equipment and technical services was reached in September, the radio said. In August, the two countries agreed to develop economic projects and deepen relations. The Iranian news agency said the projects would include oil pipelines and a railroad linking the Soviet Union with the Gulf.

Purchasers Noted Expansion In U.S. Economy in Month

NEW YORK - The U.S. industrial economy continued to expand briskly in September, the National Association of Purchasing Man-agement said in its latest report set for release Monday.

Seoul Says U.S. Is Too Slow on Trade

By Fred Hiarr

Washington Post Service SEOUL — U.S. pressure on South Korea to open its markets to imports has chiefly benefited Japan, according to Korean officials.

South Korea lifted import restrictions on 24 items at U.S. in the resulting new business, the offi-U.S. companies' share was only 18 percent, the Ministry of Trade and Industry said in a report. The American companies simply did not move fast enough," it said.

economists in Seoul acknowledged some truth in the Korean claims, which appeared aimed at blunting further U.S. pressure. But they said the primary reason that U.S. companies have trouble selling in Korea remains South Korean import barriers, not Japanese competition or lack of U.S. competitiveness. "In general, American companies have done as well as can be expected," said James W. Booth, executive vice president of the American Chamber of Commerce in Korea. The South Koreans, he said, are "blowing smoke in one direction while reaching around with the other hand and cutting off imports." South Korea recorded a $7.4 billion trade surplus with the United States last year and the imbalance is expected to grow this year. The United States buys around 40 percent of Korea's exports. In contrast, South Korean trade with Ja-

G-7 Currency Pact Will Divert Speculation, U.S. Analyst Says

Canada - reaffirmed their determination to coordinate economic policies and stabilize exchange rates. The United States and Britain announced proposals to strengthen the system, including plans for the manitoring of world commodity prices. James A. Baker 3d the U.S. Treasury secretary, said gold should be one of the targeted commodities.

Economics correspondent Reginald Dale spoke with Howard Kurz, partner in the New York investment management firm of Buchen, Kurz & Co. Until recently, Mr. Kurz was chief currency trader at Bank of Americans ca, where he typically traded $5 billion to $10 billion daily.

Q. How will the markets react? A. In the short term, the strategy should stabilize the dollar. People feel that the dollar is not going to move out of its agreed range. Right now the G-7 is winning.

The whole reason for the proposals on commodity prices was to show the market that the G-7 has other weapons in the back of the closet, in addition to currency inter-vention and interest rate changes. The group's leaders are making it clear that they want to be taken very seriously, they want to be seen as real statesmen, and they are telling the market "Don't even try thinking about an attack on the dollar."

But they are buying currency stability at the expense of instability in other markets. They are creating two ills for one cure. What do you mean by that? A. By restricting movements in the dol-kets, where we are seeing big fluctuations.

U.S. bonds have become a major speculative pool. The U.S. bond market should not commodity prices?

be the world's largest casino. It was meant to finance U.S. government over-expendi-ture. Now its whole purpose is being frustrated. At some point its volatility is bound to increase, particularly if major Japanese investors decide to pull out.

Q. Is that likely? A. Japanese investors bought nearly half the bonds auctioned by the U.S. government last year. They have an enormous appetite for U.S. Treasury bonds and they hardly ever sell them. But when they do they sell massively.

Suppose Japan got into financial trouble and wanted to pull back foreign investments. Or let's say that in November the Japanese don't like the probable U.S. presidential candidates for 1988, they don't like the American political and economic seenario and they want to get out of U.S. bonds. That would have a twofold effect. They would sell the bonds for dollars and then they would sell the dollars. Japan's massive dollar purchases are the only thing that has kept the dollar from plunging to under 100 yen from today's rate of well

Q. What about the proposal to monitor

A. By dragging commodities in, Mr. Baker is effectively seeking to float the dollar against a gold-anchored commodity basket. How would it work anyway? Is the Federal Reserve going to buy pork bellies to support prices? How do you stabilize the price of soybeans? South Africa and the Soviet Union control gold production. What if Brazil decided not to export coffee for a month or someone tried to corner the silver market again?

Q. Why then does the market appear to be taking the proposal seriously? A. The market was starved of news and wanted something fresh. The psychology of the market is such that it can convince itself of anything.

Q. What then are the longer-term pros-pects for the dollar?

A. The G-7's latest strategy probably has a mileage of three to six months. But actually I believe we will see new dollar lows fers for a currency. That makes transac-

United States. We need a real changearound in our productivity and spending habits and in our lack of ability to save.

We can hold the dollar temporarily by raising interest rates. But at some point we will run out of people ready to take the exchange rate risk of buying dollars for the sake of a marginally higher yield. Each interest rate increase will create a little more demand, but then the world oversupply of dollars will take over again and we have to raise the rates again.

Anyway, many people in the market believe that the U.S. authorities are letting interest rates go up now so that they can be brought down a little next spring in the run-up to the presidential election. It is very difficult to win votes in a recession, and it has been proved that voter dissatisfaction goes up as interest rates rise.

Q. As a trader, don't you have an interest in currency volatility rather than the stabil-ity that Mr Baker and his colleagues are trying to achieve?

A. Any speculative operator is generally in favor of some volatility, but not too much. When the dollar was moving by 5 to 10 percent a day two-and-a-half years ago, that was just as bad as, if not worse than, a weekly move of only half a percent.

Extreme volatility makes it more difficult and more expensive to do business because banks have to cover themselves by widening the spread between bids and ofbefore the end of the year. Chase Manhattan Wins American Airlines $500 Million Loan

Vasquez Takes WBA Title; Rosi, Mitchell Prevail

The Assertated Press SEOUL - Wilfredo Vasquez of Puerto Rico stopped champion Park Chan-yong of South Korea in the 10th round here

Sunday, capturing the World Boxing Asociation bantamweight title. Vasquez, 25, improved his pro record to 24-2-1. Park. 34, was making the first defense of the title he won from Takuya

Muguruma in May; he fell to 25-4-2.
On unanimous decisions elsewhere, Gianfranco Rosi of Italy took the World Boxing Council super-welterweight title and South African Brian Mitchell kept his WBA super-featherweight crown. In Gravelines, France, Mitchell floored

French champion Daniel Londas twice over 15 rounds Saturday night in running his record to 32-1-2. It was the third successful defense for Mitchell, 26, since he won the title from Panamanian Alfredo Layne in September 1986. Londas is 41-6-. In Perugia. fourth league and threw three touchdown passes as the substitute Saints beat Los Angeles to the delight of fans who chanted, "Stay on Strike." Fourcade was cut by the Giants and the Saints in preseason camps in 1985 and 1986, after playing in the Canadian Football League and the U.S. Football League. He spent fore getting a call to fill in during the NFL players strike. Every center snap was an adven-ture, with each team fumbling one and kickers and shotgun quarterbacks having to stretch repeatedly for others. Pass routes sometimes confused quarterbacks more than defensive backs.

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK - Extra points decided a one-point game Saturday between two of the top-ranked U.S.

Third-rated Miami edged No. 4. Florida State, 26-25, because the Hurricanes were successful on two

U.S. COLLEGE FOOTBALL two-point conversions and the Seminoles failed on one one-point kick and had a two-point conversion pass knocked down in the end zone with 42 seconds left to play. Miami, 3-0, rallied from a 16point third-quarter deficit to beat Florida State, 4-1, for the ninth time in the schools' last 10 meetings in Tallahassee. The Hurricanes have won 24 straight regular-season games, 17 on the road, and have a 19-1 record on the road under the coaching of Jimmy Johnson.

Florida State lost its lead in the fourth quarter for the third straight year as Steve Walsh's three touchdown passes put the Hurricanes ahead, 26-19, with 2:22 left, the go-ahead points coming on a 73-yard pass to Michael Irvin.

The Seminoles, whose secondhalf mistakes let the Hurricanes back into the contest, scored on Danny McManus's 18-yard pass to Ronald Lewis with 42 seconds left, but McManus's pass on the conversion try was knocked down by cor-nerback Bubba McDowell. Florida State's coach, Bobby Bowden, intended to go for a tie but changed his mind because Derek Schmidt had missed on the extra point kick and field goal tries of 31 and 29 yards. The Seminoles had botched another field goal try in the first quarter that led to a 51-yard loss.

"I thought we had the game won, and we lost it," Bowden said. "And I don't know how."

Equities and government bonds were bolstered over the week by renewed official pledges for currency stability and by com-ments from Nigel Lawson, the chancellor of the Exchequer, on British inflation and eco-

Tigers Win AL East With a 3d Straight 1-Run Defeat of Jays

DETROIT—The Detroit Tigers won the American League East title Sunday by beating the Toronto Blue Jays, 1-0, behind the six-hit pitching of Frank Tanana and Larry Herndon's home run.

The Blue Jays lost their last seven games of the season, including three in a row in this season-ending series in Detroit, squandering a SUNDAY BASEBALL lead over the Tigers that was 3½ games on Sept. 26.

The Tigers finished the season two games ahead of the Blue Jays and avoided a one-game playoff that would have been held Monday in Detroit had the Blue Jays won.

Tanana pitched his third shutout this year, walking three and striking out nine. Herndon put the Tigers ahead once and for all in this season of struggle with a one-out homer in the second inning off Toronto's ace, Jimmy Key, who al-lowed only three hits, struck out eight and finished with the AL earned-run title at 2.76.

All seven of the games the Blue Jays and Tigers played in the final two weeks of the season were decided by one run, and two went extra innings, including Saturday's 3-2, 12-inning victory that put the Tigers a game ahead.

In that game, Alan Trammell drove a single through the legs of drawn-in shortstop Manny Lee with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the 12th.

Toronto left-hander Mike Flans on first dueled Jack Morris, then Mike Henneman, through 11 in-nings, striking out nine while giving up eight hits. Morris, in his nine innings, also allowed eight hits while striking out six, then Henneman pitched three inning of hitless relief. And when Flanagan was relieved at the start of the 12th, the Tigers quickly took advantage.

Jeff Musselman started the inning and got one out before yielding consecutive singles to Lou Whitaker and Bill Madlock. Then he walked Kirk Gibson to load the bases. That brought on Mark Eichborn.

On his first pitch, Trammell hit a ground ball that appeared to take a short hop under the glove of Lee, who was playing in for a possible play at the plate. Lee was filling in for all-star Tony Fernandez, who broke his elbow in a game against the Tigers on Sept. 24

The Tigers moved into a first-place tie with the Blue Jays on Friday night, taking a 4-3 victory behind home runs by Trammell and rookie Scott Lusader and two errors that led to two uncarned runs.

PARIS — Trempolino came from off the pace Sunday to overtake favored Reference Point and win the $1.1 million Arc de Triomphe, giving jockey Pat Eddery of Ireland an unprec-edented third straight victory in Europe's richest horse race. The American-bred Trempo-lino, owned by Paul de Mous of France, caught the fading Ref-erence Point down the stretch, then held off the Italian colt Tony Bin to win by two lengths. His time, 2 minutes, 26.30 seconds, broke the record for the 2.4-kilometer (11/2-mile) race by 1.4 seconds.

Reference Point, who had won seven of his nine races and was race. Mtoto had been the only horse to beat Reference Point this year. Cauthen quickly took Reference Point to the lead and had as much as a length advantage over the rest of the 11-horse field. But the favorite began to fade when Eddery and Trempolino mounted their challenge down the stretch. Reference Point had been attempting to become the Derby winner to do so. "As soon as Eddery challenged, that was it," Cauthen said. "My horse was over the top. After they went by me, Reference Point pulled up to nearly a trot in three strides. He was gone."

Eddery said he was uncon-cerned by Reference Point's lead because "I could see he was gone." Trempolino, a chestnut offspring of the British horse Sharpen Up and the French horse Trephine, broke the Arc record of 2:27 set last year by Dancing Brave, also ridden by Eddery.

ANTIBES, France - The opening events surrounding the Françoise Gilot exhibition at the Picasso Museum in Antibes went beyond the usual slick cast and white wine. There were official receptions, a guided visit and, the night before the vernissage, a din-ner at a restaurant in the old port where she presided over a U-shaped table of local dignitaries, her New York and California dealers and some 30 Gilot collectors and admirers who had come from the United States for the opening and for a tour with Gilot of three Riviera museums. At the dinner Gilot, who is a compact, handsome woman with graygreen eyes as unyielding as the sea, sat attentive and serene. She was making a triumphant return.

In August 1946, Pablo Picasso and his young mistress Françoise Gilot were offered work space in a ramshackie local museum, formerly the Château Grimaldi, on the ramparts of Antibes. After the grayness and restrictions of wartime Paris it was a moment of rebirth and joy: Picasso's great work from the period is called "La Joie de Vivre" and the jubilant dancing nude in the center is Françoise. When winter began to draw in, the couple returned to Paris, leaving behind 25 Picasso paintings and 44 preparatory sketches that became the base for the rechristened Picasso Museum, the first dedicated to a living art-ist, according to the museum's official history.

Among the paintings left behind was a sober "Still Life With Open Wings," Picasso-influenced but by Gilot. It is a key piece in her current show and its title was premonitory: Gilot's wings were indeed open to fly and in 1954 she

In "Life With Picasso" (written with Carlton Lake) she describes how Picasso tried to put a curse on her future, saying. "Even if you think people like you, it will only be a kind of curiosity they will have about a person whose life has touched mine so intimately.... For you reality is finished; it ends right here."

she was unaffected "People think I believed in that tract. So perhaps that is what people really do not know, which is that although I had been ostra-cized or supposedly beheaded, my life went on."

She married a French painter, Luc Simon, by whom she had a daughter, who is studying archi-tecture in California. In 1969, after an exhibition in Los Angeles, she met Jonas Salk, the polio vaccine pioneer. They were married the following year and live in La Jolla, California. Gilot also has studios in Montmartre and New

Next month a book, "Françoise Gilot: An Artist's Journey," will be published by the Atlantic Monthly Press, She has also written poems and "Interface: The Painter and the Mask," which she describes as a philosophical work, and she is working on a book about Matisse.

She works at least 10 hours a day and, an insomniac since adolescence, wastes little time on sleep, which accounts, she ex-plains, for her wide culture. She is daunting, this woman who has shared her life with two of this century's most consequential men and has managed a respectable career on her own: an expert horsewoman who identified more with the centaurs than with the nymphs in Picasso's drawings and whom Picasso would follow in his chauffeur-driven car as she galloped through the Bois de Boulogne in their early days together (he even thought of sculpting her as an equestrian Joan of Arc). She is straight-backed with broad hands and a nice manner no one would mistake for weakness.

nice," she says. Danièle Giraudy, the curator of the museum in Antibes, says that Gilot reminds her which makes Gilot laugh.
"I see myself as somebody very natural doing what I want to do, rather willfully that's true, but not in a heroic posture." The willfulness was there from the start if one reads "Life with Picasso." Their courtship was a battle of wills. Françoise is 21 and Picasso is three times her age, besotted by her looks and brains and totally unaware of her adamantine spirit. At the end she wins, the only one of Picasso's women to have done

"A lot of people have tried to kill me either literally or figuratively, but I move too fast and usually I'm not there when they hit," she says. "Also, I don't care what people think.

"You have to admit too that most women who have done something with their lives have been disliked by almost everyone, so if you want as a woman to be really an individual you know you are going to be disliked by almost everybody — men, grandparents, children, everyone.

Her son, Claude, and her daughter, Paloma, have come to Antibes for the exhibition (Gilot's first European retrospective), which covers the years 1943-1986, from a study of a drab and weary woman at the Café de Flore during the Occupation to richly col-ored banners from the '80s influenced by Japanese kakemonos and tankas from Tibet. The fact that visitors might be initially attracted by the Picasso association worries her not at all. "People always say stupid things about you. In life you must do what you must

Falling Into Desuetude

By William Safire JASHINGTON - As the Wenate deliberated the nomination to the Supreme Court of Judge Robert H. Bork, logophiles weighed the words of the solons and the nominee.

Penumbra nearly shadowed all. Because the rights of privacy inter-ested lawmakers who hoped the courts, rather than the Congress, would handle that persuickety is-sue, Justice William O. Douglas' opinion in Griswold vs. Connecticut was often quoted. He had writ-ten that "specific guarantees in the Bill of Rights have penumbras, formed by enanatious from those guarantees that help give them life and substance."

An emanation, from the Latin for "flow," is something "emitted from a source," like a gas belching from a pool. A penumbra — from the Latin passe, "almost," and umbra, "shadow" — means literally "al-most shadow." It was first used in 1604 by the German astronomer Johannes Kepler, and a half-century later made it into English: "The Moon was not at all obscured by the true shadow, but entred only a little into the Penumbra."

Astronomers used the term to describe the area of faint light, or partial shadow, that surrounds the total shadow in an eclipse. The word crossed over to general use in u figurative sense of the gray area between black-and-white issues. The British novelist Maria Edgeworth wrote in her 1801 story "Angelina" that "I will defend him penning and the state of the state of the state of anistocratic insolence." T.S. Eliot gave the hazy area more currency in drafts of his poem "The Waste Land" in the early 1920s: "Within this penumbral consciousness. . . .

Thus, Douglas - a good and careful writer -- chose an apt word to describe what he believed to be a shadowy area, slightly illuminated by light coming from parts of the Constitution, that formed a "right of privacy." A word of similar ing, though not a synonym, is fringe; the noun penumbra can also mean "area of obscurity" or "part shaded by doubt." When penumbra is confused with a different noun also formed from the Latin for "shadow," umbrella, semanticists take umbrage. Discussing the anti-contracep-

"autty." challengeable on many grounds, but had criticized Doug-las's reasoning that led to the cre-ation of an undefined and potentially confusing penumbra. law ... was an unterly antique statute. Nobody would ever have enforced it. I think you'd have a great argument of no fair warning, or sometimes what lawyers call ---and I hate to use a word like this --desuctude, meaning it's just so out of date it's gone into limbo."

Denetude is rooted in the Latin for "disuse" and means the same today. It first appeared in Henry Cockeram's 1623 English Dictionarie, or An Interpreter of Hard En-glish Words, defined as "lacke of use," but made it big in politics when President Grover Cleveland in 1886 sent a message to Congress that touched on the disuse into which the once-controversial Ten-ure of Office Act had fallen: "After an existence of nearly 20 years of almost innocuous desuetude, these laws are brought forth."

DURING his 35 hours of testimony at the Senate confirmation hearings, Bork was criticized for "rigidity" and "inflexibility" on his views that had not changed, and criticized for what Senator Patrick J. Leahy called "this metamorphosir" on views that had changed. The judge tried to point out that his role changed — from precedent-chal-lenging professor to solicitor general to precedent-following judge — which had an effect on what he had

The assertion of views different from those held when he wrote as a professor in 1971 led to Leahy's charge of metamorphosis. That is a word that came into English in Sir Thomas More's 1533 writing about witchcraft (thereby lending ammu-nition to those who defended Bork as a victim of a "witch hunt"). It is from the Greek for "transformation," and gained a meaning in biology as "a profound change in form during the life of an organism." In its figurative meaning today, the word denotes more than mere alteration or modification of views, which is why it was rejected by Bork supporters.
